

Belted Kingfisher

The Belted Kingfisher is the most common species of kingfisher in the United States. It has a shaggy crest and a dark slate blue plumage, with a white breast. Females have rufous across the upper belly. Their call is a loud rattle.