

Cooper's Hawk

Cooper's Hawks are birds of prey native to the Americas. These birds are fierce hunters who prey upon other birds. Adults have grey upperparts with reddish barring across a light belly. The tail has dark bands and is tipped in white. They have a dark cap of feathers on the head, and piercing red eyes. Males and females look alike, though females may be up to one third larger.

