

Golden-winged Warbler

The Golden-winged Warbler, a small North American species, is easily identifiable by its bright yellow wing patches and crown, contrasted against its gray body and black throat. It has a contrasting black throat and white underparts. The rest of its body is a soft gray, with fine black markings near the eyes, adding to its distinctive appearance.

See colors and learn more

