

Harpy Eagle

The Harpy Eagle is the largest species of raptor found in the Americas. Males and females look alike, though females are usually larger and may be nearly twice as heavy as males. They have black bodies with white underparts and grey stripes on their legs. Their crested heads are grey.

